Instructions for authors

EAGE - European Association of Geoscientists & Engineers

EAGE is a professional association for geoscientists and engineers. Founded in 1951, it is an organization with a worldwide membership providing a global network of commercial and academic professionals. The association is truly multi-disciplinary and international in form and pursuits.

All members of EAGE are professionally involved in (or studying) geophysics, petroleum exploration, geology, reservoir engineering, mining and civil engineering. EAGE operates two divisions: the Oil & Gas Geoscience Division and the Near Surface Geoscience Division.

EAGE organises the following activities for its members:

- Events (conferences, exhibitions, workshops)
- Publications (journals, books)
- Educational Programmes (short courses, lectures)
- Student Programmes
- Recruitment
